

One of the most persistent of all Chultan legends is that of Dendar the Night Serpent.

The Night Serpent is known for devouring the nightmares of all sentient beings. She consumes all nightmares, but is particularly fond of those that are so horrifying the dreamer cannot remember them when they wake. She will be the harbinger of the end of the world and of the gods themselves.

Chultan legends tell of how Ubtao, father of Dinosaurs and creator of Chult, will battle the Night Serpent when she emerges from the Peaks of Flame and attempts to devour the sun. If Ubtao fails, the Lacerator of Worlds will devour all light, dooming the world to eternal darkness and despair.

Tangentially related to the Night Serpent is a small group of Chultan radicals that call themselves the Brotherhood of the Dying Sun. Comprised mostly of dispossessed clergy of Ubtao, the former Hazenwalkers and Spirit Lords believe that by releasing Dendar from her prison, it will force an indifferent Ubtao to once again pay attention to his loyal followers.

While prominent several decades ago, the Brotherhood failed to gain traction with the native Chultan races and promptly faded into obscurity.
